BETTER CHRYSANTHEMUMS

1937

NEW VARIETY, ANNA KASKAS

THE question of cost, or the most economical method of producing our crops today, is quite as important as is the quality of our finished stock,—sometimes more so. This means that we must count costs.

In producing really good mum cuttings, figure the cost of a light bench through winter and spring for stock plants, insecticide bills to keep them clean, and sometimes loss of cuttings in the sand. An increasing number of large growers are finding, too, that propagating time hits them when they are so engaged with the Spring rush that it pays them for this reason alone to order all cuttings from responsible propagators for delivery when and as wanted. This plan starts the crop off with an unchecked uniform lot of plants,—an important advantage.

Depending upon a list such as you will find in this catalog has the further advantage of permitting you to select most suitable or the better varieties, and this is of first importance today.

SEND US A LIST EARLY OF YOUR MUM REQUIREMENTS.

On the last pages of this catalog will be found notes on mum growing, particularly the black cloth shading method for early flowering. This might interest you.

GEO. J. BALL, Inc., West Chicago, Ill.

Please Note

Ordering Early

The discount allowed on early orders and the greater assurance of delivery makes it important to order as early as you are in position to do so. The list of varieties offered in this catalog is the most extensive in America, and with such a list shortages do develop, especially late in the season.

Our improved facilities and increased supplies for the coming year cannot prevent some varieties selling out late in the season. All our stock is propagated for us at Barberton, Ohio, from where it is shipped. It is guaranteed clean, free of disease, well rooted, carefully packed, and to reach you in nice shape.

General increase of costs has made a slight price increase necessary this season, of Standard varieties, on 1000 lots. The 100 rate remains unchanged.

When fewer than 25 of a variety are ordered, charges will be made at the rate per 10.

25 of a variety will be billed at the 100 rate; 250 of a variety will be billed at the 1000 rate.

Following are the 100 rates on various classes, together with the rate on each per 10. We do not supply less than 10 of any variety, except first year Novelties.

Where the price per 100 is:

$3.00	$4.00	$4.50	$5.00	$6.00	$7.00	$8.00	$10.00	$12.00	$15.00

New Varieties

On this and following pages you will find the season's approved novelties. They are all from well known dependable raisers. We have personally acquainted ourselves with all these varieties; and if given a chance, they will be found a distinct advance in American Chrysanthemums.

A Few Cultural Suggestions

Soil

A fairly light loam, one that is neither really heavy nor very light, suits Chrysanthemums very well, and this avoiding of extremes in soil texture goes for most cut flower crops. The good tilth or condition of the soil is important. This is influenced by drainage that must be such that it will not remain wet too long. Lack of good drainage in deep ground beds is not responsible for every weak, lifeless lot of mums we meet with, for there are other factors we will touch upon; but poor drainage helps along any trouble that is present in the soil. Wet, soggy soil, one that packs and lacks aeration is certain to rot the roots and that means production is not usually so uniformly good, tho, as it is on raised shallow beds where drainage is, of course, perfect. Used soil in ground beds is all right for mums. In fact, the accumulated fertility in it will produce a freer growth than fresh soil, we find, but after two or three years enough harmful material accumulates through heavy watering and manuring to interfere with the growth of mums too. We get our soil back into fine shape again by drenching it thoroughly with hot water. If applied at 200°, it has some sterilizing value. Steam sterilizing followed by drenching with cold water is, no doubt, equally as good—maybe better. Important to remember is that annual or heavy application of manure to soil accumulates trouble in it. Outdoors this is taken care of by frost and drenching rains that can not serve us in the greenhouse. Condition or management of the soil is really the foundation of the crop, so pay attention to it, especially to drainage that permits air circulation at the roots.

Cold Houses

For some years we have been using what we refer to as Cold Houses for our shaded mums. As will be noted in the several pictures, these houses are without sides and ventilators. They are as nearly perfect for mum growing as they can be and their low cost greatly reduces the high overhead figure that must be charged on the big modern structures. This overhead is frequently the profit. These houses can either be made up of sash, which was used in the house pictured on page 20 or built more permanently. When constructed of used material we find the cost moderate, around 30c per sq. ft. covered. These houses are largely used for the big standards that must be protected more closely against rot or spotting than pompons. We run a few 1 inch steam pipes through these houses for we sometimes have days of damp cold weather and occasionally a real frost that should be guarded against with the drying effect of some heat.

"Enclose Your Mum With Your Seed Order"

The past season we noted a successfully flowered crop in an outdoor 6 ft. bed with a frame built over it for covering with sash; instead of glass the sash were covered with a water proofed cloth. This protection was not used until after buds were taken. We should add that the frame work for the sash also served for the black cloth shading. This low cost plan was noted about Philadelphia, but I believe that with the use of early October varieties, it would be successfully used in our earlier frost latitude. We are planning to try it out with 60 day varieties, starting the shade July 15th. With such open-side construction as this, or our cold houses, some trouble must be anticipated with outdoor insects, such as grasshoppers and corn-borers which did us some damage last season. Only effective thing we could do was hand pick them, but for the benefit of chewing insects generally, nothing is more efficient than Arsenate of Lead, except for the corn-borer that bores into the flowers. For leaf tyers, nothing is better than the Pyrethrum sprays, and when mealy bugs must be contended with, use Lethane 420.

We must, in our latitude, be prepared to protect young stock from frost if planted out before the 15th or 20th of May. For good Commercial flowers we space to allow around 50 sq. inches for each stem or flower, somewhat more, about 7x8 for strong growing or large leaved kind and 6x8 for the general run of varieties. This fall we noted several good growers, using two plants together, spacing 8x12, instead of individually 6x8. This probably allows freer circulation of air, and it does permit freer use of tools in cultivating early in the season. We note too that many growers who retail their flowers grow 2, 3 and 4 flowers to a plant, but in our very competitive Wholesale Market, these smaller flowers would not pay. We note that in England the larger flowers are not so popular, three or four smaller ones being considered of more value than a larger one. In Paris, on the other hand the bigger they are the better they like them. This means that we must know what our market prefers, and plan accordingly.

Showing method of applying black-cloth shade. This shading plan requires two men, a half-hour to let down the cloth, and the same time to put up. Much less cloth is required when covered in this way than when beds are covered, side and top individually. In large houses with no obstructing posts, the entire area, including walks should be covered as a single unit.

"Enclose Your Mum With Your Seed Order"

A few words on the taking of buds. As a rule we find that the terminal is the safest. This is usually the second one, so called because it terminates the growth. The first or crown bud shows up early and is distinguished by growths instead of buds appearing from below the central or crown bud. The crown bud sometimes produces extra large flowers but we might say, frequently, these rather premature buds produce imperfect flowers. With shaded stock, no consideration need be given this question for this treatment usually produces terminals.

Shading for Early Flowering

This means that either the pompon or big standards are flowered within 50 to 75 days from the date shading begins—the late varieties require the longer time. This somewhat unnatural trick does not in any way affect the vigor of the stock, but the color of some varieties is changed due to flowering during warmer weather than they naturally do. In England where mums are flowered from mid-summer on, and possibly under some American conditions, this early flowering might not be so desirable, but the objection occasionally heard, that this early stock cannot compete with Dahlias and Asters, is a mistake, for, when well grown and proper varieties used, the flowers are perfect in every way, and are looked forward to with the first suggestion of Fall weather. Though some specialists get the big mums in around Sept. 1st, we do not recommend doing so earlier than the beginning of cooler weather, which is around Sept. 15th in our latitude. When flowered during warm periods such as we get up to Sept. 15th, the flowers are softened and there is danger of loss through spot or rotting of flowers. Unless only hard varieties are used, there might be some loss after Sept. 15th.

There are various methods of adjusting black cloth shading to a bed of mums. Our plan of running the cloth over the house pictured on page 20, will, of course, only do for rather small houses somewhat protected from high wind. In large wide houses, without interfering posts, the cloth is run over the entire area, walks and all. This saves considerable because the cloth on the sides of beds shaded individually, is frequently half the total used, but, when we have an individual bed to shade, a light framework is built over it to support lengthwise wires. Over this the cloth is unrolled. For the sides, cloth wide enough to reach the ground is suspended from a top, side wire, by means of eyelets in the edge of the cloth. This plan permits the cloth to be pushed out of use during the day. The same plan for the sides is used when an entire house is covered as a unit. Black sateen cloth is generally used for shading. Costs around 18-20c per square yard and if stored dry, when not in use, and where mice won't get into it, we find it good for three years. We have noted several growers making successful use of a strong grade of building paper. This should work out nicely for at least the top of beds, for there is no reason why it cannot be unrolled over the top and weighted down, if necessary. But for the sides, cloth will, no doubt, work better. Use of paper will greatly reduce the one costly factor—black cloth. Any material will do, of course, that will shut out the light to what it naturally is when nearly dark, not necessarily totally dark. Also, if a few days' shading are missed or the cloth blown off in the night a few times, it will not affect the final setting of buds that should take place in 3-4 weeks with big mums. Soon as buds are large enough to safely take, discontinue the shading, except on the pompons. Shading should be continued on them until first or center buds show color, or are ready to open. Unless this is done, the side or lower buds will not be set along with those about the top, resulting in fewer flowers.

One of our cold houses—pipe-frame construction. No ventilators or side walls. Ideal growing conditions for this crop. Silver Sheen is shown. We find it an excellent early white, being particularly hard and not easily spotted by rot. This is a very important point when flowered during hot weather. Some growers report Betsy Ross even better for this early crop,—not quite so hard as Silver Sheen, but larger and better formed. Stock shown was planted May 5th, shading begun July 15th, photographed September 12th.

Probably the most important point in this early flowering method is planting early and using unchecked young stock. Reason is to get enough stem before shading starts, for, of course, the setting of buds nearly ends lengthening of stem, around 12-18 in. more can be counted on for big mums and 10-12 in. for the pompons. Naturally, long-stemmed kinds under favorable conditions will draw some longer. Stock propagated late January or February is all right, especially for pompons, but if this early stock is checked or hardened through getting too dry, or overcrowding, it will be clearly better to use a late February or March start. In fact, we supply several of the largest growers with their entire supply of stock in the form of rooted cuttings at the proper planting dates.—usually in May.

A check in young stock has a far more stunting effect on growth than is generally appreciated, and when good cuttings are used for direct planting, there is little or no danger of it being checked. Unskilled labor is the principal cost in a crop of mums; little or no fuel, and cuttings at $25.00 per 1000 make it an inexpensive crop to produce; but the margin of profit is not unduly large and cost account records will show that it entirely disappears if it is not well grown. So keep in mind these important points: Well drained soil, unchecked growth, insects, and the best varieties.

"Enclose Your Mum With Your Seed Order"

The Large Mums

We usually find well grown pompons pay out better than the large mums because of labor involved, but pompons are more easily overdone and this might become especially true of the shaded crop, so we mustn't pass up the big ones, but there is no worth while demand for them in our section until after mid-September. Around the first of September a few of the big, rather coarse California flowers are attractive for the store, but in our latitude, we do not find the average returns on big shaded stock profitable much earlier than mid-September. We find that the earliest propagated stock, that we usually start late January and early February, is frequently not so desirable because it easily gets somewhat hardened or overgrown. When young stock gets a check in this way it clearly shows up along side a lot of cuttings that have grown right along without a check.

Complaints are sometimes received of chrysanthemums being diseased, lower foliage dried up and lacking free growth. While much of this is due to lack of drainage and diseased soil, we know from experience that it is sometimes caused by the young stock becoming hardened or checked before planting. Cuttings put in the sand late in March, rooted slow and planted out early in May from the sand, will sometimes get ahead of an earlier started lot. However, a February start planted in a cold house usually makes very nice planting stock if given reasonable care.

Pompons

In our latitude pompons that we start shading July 15th can, three seasons out of four, we find, be successfully flowered in the open without glass. Varieties as early as Irene are generally safe, but those coming in a week or so later are naturally of better quality, and we find it pays to use them and to run a few inch steam pipes through the beds. Further protection is afforded by the black shading cloth that is left in position ready to pull over them when and if needed. Also, throughout the summer we shade them with the same cloth used for aster houses. This provides some protection against cold winds but its more important use is to shelter against the hot sun and drying winds of summer. This light shade also tends to draw the growth and to keep it from hardening. For this outdoor crop that we start shading July 15th, with protection as suggested, we use only varieties that flower naturally in October. Our preferred list in this class is Nuggets, Improved Rodell, Pink Dot, Jewell and Irene, and there are others.

We find glass protection necessary for such as flower naturally in November—shading could be started earlier on the later kind, flowering them around October 1st or a week later, but we find it difficult to get long enough stems to start shading much earlier than July 15th. In shading pompons, we find they lengthen from the time shading begins 12-15 in.: the height or length of stem, when in flower can be figured by their height when shading starts. If the plants are rather short at this time, better forget the shade and let them come naturally.

Every season shaded pompons can be seen on most markets that are unprofitably short-stemmed. Planting early is, of course, necessary to get good stems. We try to get this finished around May 10th-15th.

We space most of our pompons 8x8, though 6x8 in. is plenty for such as make a rather spare growth; New York, Chicago Pearl are examples of such. We hardly find Princeton profitable either, unless spaced close. Of course, the size of the planting stock and the success of its growth will determine how well it will fill out, but lots of pompons are planted that would have yielded heavier if closer spacing had been used.

Do Mums Pay?

Not unless you get a clean vigorous growth into them, get much of the work done with unskilled help, and use good, not necessarily the newest varieties. We find our cold house idea increases the quality and reduces costs. We also find that shading for early flowers pays, and we are interested, too, in the possibilities of a kraft paper instead of cloth for shading. We have been growing mums a long time and are at your service.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America

If there are but two florists in a community, they will, if they are going to flourish, get together. To prosper we must exchange ideas and stabilize the prices of our product. If we won't we mustn't blame a paternalistic government for trying to compel us to do so. This co-operative spirit, of course, extends to the specialists in our business.

Shading for early flowers and greatly improved varieties is running the annual value of Chrysanthemums into millions of dollars. And,—do you realize that this interest has been fostered and promoted to what it is today by the "Chrysanthemum Society of America," and that this Society was established 56 years ago? Its annual exhibition and meeting is the authoritative Chrysanthemum occasion of the year. To keep its members in close touch with the latest information on culture and varieties, the Society issues a quarterly bulletin. Your interest in Chrysanthemums will profit by receiving this bulletin and going along with us.
